Packed house on hand for inaugural Blue Grass sale

With a full house, both in the seats around the sale ring as well as in the holding pens out back, Clinton County's newest business held its opening ceremonies and initial sale last Wednesday morning, with hundreds of spectators and literally thousands of subjects.

The Blue Grass Stockyards, located in the Snow Community of central Clinton County, was officially opened last Wednesday morning, with company officials joining local, state and national government officials as well as hundreds of local farmers, beef producers and others related to the area agriculture industry.

The pre-sale fan-fare was brief and to the point, beginning with a quick ribbon cutting ceremony near the main entrance to the facility, followed by a handful of company and government representatives making short statements after the awaiting crowd moved inside to the sale ring.

Several people addressed the standing room only crowd that had gathered inside the new and technologically advanced sale ring auditorium, shown at left, including Blue Grass Chief Operating Officer Jim Akers, Clinton County Judge/Executive Lyle Huff and Kentucky Department of Agriculture Commissioner James Comer.

Then, within minutes, Akers announced it was time to dispense with all of the opening events and get down to what everyone had been waiting on since the first shovel of dirt had been turned at the facility site - the sale of cattle.

And sale they did. At just about 9:30 a.m. the first ring of cattle was moved through and from there the pace quickened and continued at a steady pace all day long.

By the end of the day, Blue Grass officials reported that some 1,501 head of cattle had moved through the facility in live sales, with an additional 3,800 head being sold through the facilities internet selling technology, bringing the first day total to 5,301 head of cattle.

The local facility will serve beef producers from across this entire region, including Kentucky and Tennessee, and will have cattle sales each Wednesday and Saturday, along with several special sales held throughout the year. Additional photographs from Wednesday's opening events can be found on page 5.

Bernard prepares to assume duties as superintendent

Beginning July 1, 2012, Charlotte Bernard will begin a new career while at the same time being a part of history within the Clinton County School System.

Bernard, at age 42, will become only the second female Superintendent of Schools after being chosen from among several applicants earlier this month by a majority of Clinton County Board of Education members.

Prior to assuming the duties as the highest ranking education leader in the county, she will be making the transition from her current position as Director of Pupil Personnel and until early last week, had served almost five and-a-half years as a member of the fiscal court, having been elected magistrate of the fifth district in both 2006 and 2010.

The new superintendent feels she is ready to lead the school district and that her past positions, both as an administrator and in the classroom in the schools, as well as being an elected official on the county's governing body, will only be assets she will carry into the job as superintendent this summer.

During an interview with the Clinton County News last week, Bernard touched on her past duties as magistrate, current duties as Director of Pupil Personnel and the direction she hopes to see the school district move in her first two-year tenure.

The new superintendent said she felt her years on the fiscal court was an asset when it came to realizing the handling of finances and was proud that the county, despite the weakening economy of the past few years, has been able to maintain its balanced budget. She also noted one of the biggest accomplishments during her tenure on the court for the county as a whole was the implementation of the Emergency 911 system and county mapping.

Speaking of the county government, she noted Clinton County

Farmers Market to open Friday

With the crop and garden season now in full swing, the Farmers Market is set to open for business on Friday, June 1 at the facility located at Mountain View Park just north of Albany. The market will remain open through August 31.

The market hours for any vendors selling their produce this spring and summer will be Saturdays from 6-11 a.m. and Tuesdays and Fridays between 7 a.m. and 4 p.m., according to Park Director Bobby Reneau, who oversees the facility.

The only week the market will not be open for vegetable and produce sales will be July 31 through August 6, the week of the U.S. 127 yard sale.

Clinton County Extension Agent for Agriculture and Natural Resources Phil Smith, in noting the local Farmers Market was a Kentucky Proud member, outlined some of the various products that can be sold at the facility throughout the summer, as well as items that are not allowed.

Producers can sell vegetables of all types, fruits, honey, hay and straw, sorghum, as well as nursery and greenhouse items.

Some of the items prohibited include any type of live animals, wine and no processed meat products.

Reneau said this is about the thirteenth year that the Farmers Market has supplied an outlet for local producers to set up and sell their produce and vegetables and noted that participation has grown somewhat over the past few years.

Also, other than the normal hours and days listed above, vendors who wish to set

Earth moving equipment was being used last week to prepare a parking lot near the new fishing access point in Clinton County, located on the Cumberland River.

Construction progressing at Cumberland River fishing spot

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR) is now in the final stages of creating an area in Wells Bottom that will allow bank access to the Cumberland River for fishing purposes.

The project first came to the Clinton County Fiscal Court more than a year ago and Thursday, May 24, the path to the river was cut out and is ready for use.

"I'm going to tell people it's ready to be used," Fourth District Magistrate Ricky Craig said. "I think it will get a lot of use."

Although the project had been presented more than a year ago to the fiscal court, the KDFWR has spent three or more years on the project alone.

It became a "go" for Clinton County when the fiscal court voted to accept a road into the county system to give access from the Wells Bottom area to the lower Cumberland River.

"It's getting in the final stages. I talked to Scott (Merryfield), our contractor, and he has done a pretty nice improvement to your little community," Lee Kemper, of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife said. "I'm sure it will be greatly appreciated."

Kemper said the project was constructed to provide a 15-20 vehicle parking lot for bank fishing access.

"We are going to work with the landowner and we will have access to this resource right here," Kemper said.

Last July, Tony Wheatley, staff assistant/land acquisition, and Eric Brooker of the engineering division with the Department of Fish and Wildlife,

Local official honored in School Energy Managers Project that is reducing energy costs by nearly $13 million statewide

Bill Gittings, energy manager for the Glasgow Independent, Caverna Independent, Adair, Clinton, Cumberland and Monroe County school systems, was among 37 school staff honored recently for their part in a two-year project that will reduce Kentucky's school energy costs by nearly $13 million by the end of the school year.

Gittings received a certificate of commendation from officials of Kentucky School Boards Association (KSBA), the Beshear administration and Education Commissioner Terry Holliday during April 16 ceremonies in Lexington.

The event recognized key players in SEMP (School Energy Managers Project), an initiative funded through federal stimulus funding that expires this spring. Thirty-five energy managers and two energy curriculum coordinators were hired by coalitions of school systems since 2010. SEMP has been a partnership among the districts, KSBA and the state Department of Energy Development and Independence.

The School Energy Manager's Project (SEMP) has made a significant change in energy awareness in the Clinton County School District. A majority of the teachers, staff, and students have participated by making sure their energy consuming items are turned off before leaving their building for the day.

Our most significant impact of our "Energy Management Program" is the bottom line, comparing this year's district's energy usage in school buildings to our 2009-2010 "base line." Our energy usage savings (at today's rates) for the first ten months of this school year is currently over $55,000 (in electricity and natural gas savings.) A majority of these savings came from behavioral changes in the energy habits of our students, teachers, and staff. Our district energy team has promoted good energy habits such as turning off classroom lights, computers, monitors, speakers, classroom lights, amplifiers, DVD players, Smartboard projectors, etc. during lunch and planning periods, and at the end of each class day. Worth mentioning is Mother Nature has rewarded our district with an unusually warm winter and spring this last year.

Other positive energy impacts in our district have included;

- * the formation of a district energy team with monthly meetings to review our various energy metrics to see how well we are meeting our energy reduction goals,

- * the formation of student "Energy/Green" teams at each of our schools,

- * partnering with our Information Technologies department to run scans that indicate which computers have been left on during unoccupied hours,

- * installing dedicated cardboard and paper recycling dumpsters at each school and starting a district wide collaboration and paper recycling campaign that helps save our environment and lowers our district landfill costs,

- * the procurement of student mentoring and monitoring energy kits for each of the student "Energy/Green" teams at each of our schools (thanks to our regional National Energy Education Development for Schools (NEED) partner),

- * having a capable HVAC technician, Mr. Nat England, who can "tweak" the HVAC programs in order to provide comfort while maximizing energy savings when buildings are unoccupied,

- * the procurement of Vending-Miser electricity savings devices for a refrigerated drink machine at each school within our district (thanks in part to each school's student team leader filling out the necessary KY NEED grant funding--these devices cut down electricity use an average of 40% by allowing the drink temperature inside the machine to rise to 50 degrees F when the area the machine is located becomes unoccupied),

- * having our school superintendent, Mr. Mickey McFall, and each one of our school principals and building facilitators, take an active role in promoting good energy savings practices,

- * partnering with a variety of organizations concerned about school energy use and costs including; Kentucky Energy Efficiency Program for Schools (KEEPS), National Energy Educational Development of Schools (NEED), Kentucky Green and Healthy Students (KY G&H), Green River Regional Education Cooperative (GRREC), and the Kentucky School Board Association (KSBA).

Continued success of our energy program comes from top down support (i.e., from our school superintendent, and each of the school principals, attending our monthly energy team meetings and helping take an active role reminding and reinforcing all of our good energy savings habits to their teachers and staff.)

In conclusion, the key to the district energy program is to promote using energy wisely, because, energy is not free. Our goal is to use energy to make our students comfortable while at school so they can better learn and retain what they are being taught, but at the end of each school day, it only makes sense to turn off, or turn down, all items that consume energy during the periods when school buildings are unoccupied.

Several Blue Grass, government and business representatives squeezed behind the ribbon Wednesday morning at the opening ceremony for Blue Grass Stockyards to kick off the official opening for the new Clinton County facility. Located in the Snow Community of central Clinton County, the facility will serve this entire region, benefitting beef cattle producers in both Kentucky and Tennessee.

With Blue Grass Chief Operating Officer Jim Akers standing nearby, Clinton County Judge/Executive Lyle Huff addressed the crowd on hand for the Grand Opening of the new stockyard facility last Wednesday. The first day saw the stockyard sell 1,501 head of cattle live, with another 3,800 being sold through the internet services at the facility.

Kentucky Department of Agriculture Commissioner James Comer briefly addressed the standing room only crowd that was on hand inside the Blue Grass Stockyard arena prior to the start of the first cattle sale. Comer, who is serving his first term as Agriculture Commissioner and is from nearby Monroe County, told the crowd it was "good to get home" to enjoy an event such as the Blue Grass grand opening.

County, two young Monticello men lost their lives.

According to Kentucky State Police, London Post 11, they received a call from Wayne County Dispatch at approximately 1:40 a.m. Eastern Time Sunday, May 27, of a single vehicle traffic crash on KY 3284 in the city limits of Monticello.

Upon arrival, KSP Traffic Crash Reconstructionist Trooper Delzie Kelly determined that a 2007 Suzuki motorcycle, operated by Matthew J. Pierce, 23, of Monticello, was traveling west-bound on KY 3284 when it left the right shoulder of the roadway and struck a house.

Pierce and his passenger, Jordan B. Crouch, 23, also of Monticello, were ejected from the motorcycle and sustained fatal injuries.

Pierce and Crouch, who were not wearing helmets, were pronounced dead at the scene by Wayne County Coroner Forrest Hicks.

Trooper Kelly is in charge of the investigation and was assisted at the scene by Trooper Wendell Higginbotham, the Monticello Police Department, Wayne County Sheriff's Department, Wayne County EMS, Monticello Fire Department, and Wayne County Coroner's Office.

"It's (market) open to anyone who wants to sell," said Reneau. "We have never charged for the booths."

The Farmers Market was funded several years ago and continues to receive funds from the Phase II tobacco settlement and the Rec/Park Board maintains the building.

Strawberries have already been sold from the market and Reneau noted they would try to accommodate any vendor that has early crops they would like to sell at the location.

"As long as the building is not being used, especially week days for sure," producers will be allowed to set up and sell their products.

Reneau noted that last year, there were seven or eight regular vendors who operated most of the growing season while several others used the building at various other times.

WAYNE CO. OUTLOOK Monticello

A lengthy search by several agencies, including the Wayne County Rescue Squad, ended early last Sunday morning, when four people who got lost while four-wheeling were located.

The four individuals were located at about 7 a.m. on Sunday in the area of Blackhouse Mountain Road and Store 14 Road, according to information released by the Monticello-Wayne County 911 Communications Center. All four were unharmed.

The local dispatch center was notified of the search at about 12:50 a.m. Sunday, May 20, when they received a call from the Fentress County 911 Center.

Fentress County officials had received the report of four people four-wheeling in the Carpenter's Rock House area near the Tennessee-Kentucky border.

They were in a four-wheel drive vehicle and had apparently gotten lost in the woods.

The two 911 communications centers stayed in contact throughout the search effort, which was conducted by Kentucky Fish and Wildlife, Kentucky State Police and the Wayne County Rescue Squad.

The Rescue Squad made contact with the group early Sunday morning.

Kerr moves on to November's general election where he'll face Democrat Barry Kay McKinley, Jr.

Girdler managed to carry his home county while Polston carried Russell, Adair and Casey counties.

TOMPKINSVILLE NEWS Monroe County

After three days of an emotional trial stemming from the execution-style murder of Thomas "Max" Martin and subsequent burning of his home and body, one of Martin's killers, Johnathan Young, has been convicted and awaits sentencing from Monroe Circuit Judge Eddie C. Lovelace, while the other person charged with the slaying, Jesse Parke, is still awaiting trial.

Officials first learned of the crime after an early morning 911 call reporting a house on fire at 1600 Hope Road in the northern part of Monroe County. When firefighters arrived on the scene, they noticed a vehicle in the driveway and immediately began taking precautions to preserve as much of the scene as possible in case the owner of the vehicle was still inside the structure.

When firefighters were finally able to enter the home, they located a badly burnt human body and immediately contacted the Monroe County Sheriff's Office. Sheriff Roger Barlow, who was a deputy at the time, responded to the scene, contacting and requesting the assistance of the Kentucky State Police.

KSP Detective Michael Dubree, who lives in Monroe County, arrived on the scene shortly after being dispatched from KSP Post 15 in Columbia, and quickly located what appeared to be two bullet holes in the skull of the victim. Positive identification of the body was impossible due to the damage inflicted by fire and heat; however, officials knew that the residence has been occupied for several years by Martin.

The body was taken to the Kentucky Medical Examiner's Office in Louisville to obtain positive identification and determine cause of death, and Dubree contacted Martin's son, Marty, to get a DNA swab for comparative analysis. A criminal investigation was opened and the hunt for Martin's killers began.

Dubree and fellow KSP Detective B.J. Burton first learned that Young and Parke had been at Martin's home the night of the fire early on the morning of August 26 from Barlow, who also provided the detectives with phone numbers for both men.

Preliminary interviews were conducted with both men, who provided the detectives with false information, a tactic that continued for several days, Dubree said. Young and Parke pointed the officers toward a neighbor of Martin's, Gary Gerald, explaining that Gerald had come to Martin's house earlier in the evening and that the two men argued over the fact that Gerald owed Martin money. They explained they left the residence shortly after Gerald, fearing that he might return and cause trouble.

Assistant Commonwealth Attorney Clay Hundley called Gerald to the stand, learning that the two men had known each other for several years. Gerald testified that Martin had called him that night looking for liquor, and that Martin had been drinking that night. Gerald explained to Hundley that the two other men were inside Martin's home when he arrived, noting Max had called one of them "Jess." Gerald explained that he had left Martin's home around 10 that night and that the two other men were still there.

That statement, which Ger-alds had given detectives early in the investigation, was the first indication that something was wrong with the story provided by Young, who had told detectives that he and Parke left the residence around dark that night. Throughout the trial, Dubree testified that, from the very beginning, Young lied and attempted to mislead investigators.

The first big break in the case came when detectives were able to subpoena records from Bluegrass Cellular that tracked Young's movements the night of the murder. Using technology that shows where a phone is located by recording its proximity to area cell phone towers, officials learned that Young's phone placed him in locations other than where he had told them he had been. Those records, Dubree said, placed him near Martin's home later than he had told them, as well as placing him back in the same area very early the next morning.

When detectives informed Young about their knowledge of his misinformation, more stories ensued. In fact, Dubree testified, it wasn't until the fourth interview with Young that he seemed to begin to sense detectives were very close to closing their net and he began to talk.

According to testimony from Dubree and Detective Israel Slinker, text records from the phones of both suspects had been subpoenaed, and when Young learned that detectives would soon see those records he knew that he had better tell his story.

Parke had left for a vacation in Myrtle Beach and Young was scared. Still, though faced with the possibility of the death penalty, Young still evaded the entire truth. It wasn't until detectives convinced Young to have a telephone conversation with Parke on speaker that they learned there had also been a robbery in connection with the murder and arson. According to testimony from detectives and recorded interviews and phone calls that were played aloud for the jury, it seemed as if most of the truth was finally revealed.

Young and Parke, testimony revealed, went to Martin's house in the early evening hours of August 25. Young stated that Parke gave Martin $1200 that he owed him and that all three men had been drinking and were pretty drunk. At some point later that evening, Martin allegedly made a disparaging remark concerning Parke's wife, at which point Parke looked at Young and made a motion with his hand that indicated a gun, the testimony revealed.

What followed was the crux of the prosecution's case; text messages between Young and Parke, presumably so Martin wouldn't know what they were discussing, seemed to lead directly to Martin's death.

Young to Parke: "Wanna do the big deal."

Parke to Young: "Kill Max."

Young to Parke: "Yea get it."

Young to Parke: "Do it now."

Young to Parke: "Do it now."

According to testimony, Parke asked to see Martin's handgun, a .25 caliber semi-automatic that Martin kept with him at all times. Parke then handed the firearm to Young, who handed it back to Parke.

Parke then walked into the kitchen, only to return and find Martin slumped over in the chair, nearly passed out. The recorded interviews with Young related that Parke shot Martin in the back of the head with Martin's own handgun. Young said after the first shot that Martin looked at Parke with seeming disbelief before Parke emptied the rest of the gun's magazine into Martin.

Young told investigators that, in total, Parke shot seven or eight times. Autopsy results reported that a total of three projectiles were recovered from Martin's body, two from the head and one from the neck.

Young went on to tell detectives that after Parke finished shooting Martin, the two of them used a blanket that was in the chair behind Martin's body, to pull him out onto the floor, and that Parke then took Martin's wallet out of his pocket.

The two men went through the house for seven or eight minutes, according to Young's recorded statement, searching for a box of money that Martin allegedly kept in the house. Young recounted that Parke went into the rear of the house and got a container of kerosene and dumped the flammable liquid throughout the kitchen and bedroom of the home before lighting the fuel in an attempt to burn all the physical evidence pertaining to their crimes.

Young went on to tell the detectives that he and Parke drove back to Parke's house, but that he drove by himself back to Hope Road to make sure that the house had burnt. When he saw the house had not actually burnt, he returned to Parke's house and the pair went back to Martin's with a jug of gasoline to finish the job.

Young told investigators he waited outside in the truck while Parke went back inside and again poured flammable liquid through the interior of the residence, finishing by pouring a trail out onto the porch where he again touched a flame to it. Young reported that, this time, there was an explosion that blew the front windows out of the house. He went on to say that he took Parke back home before going to his own house and going to bed.

In summation at the close of the trial, Hundley told the jury that prosecutors were treading new ground with the case. He explained that although there were no pictures or video of the crime, there was a cyberspace picture of the murder and that the text messages were proof that, although Young didn't actually pull the trigger himself, he was the instigator to Martin's brutal homicide and that Parke was the instrument used to carry out the act.

The jury agreed with prosecutors in the case and found Young guilty of murder, second degree arson and first degree robbery, ruling that there were aggravating circumstances in this murder case. "Aggravating circumstances" refers to the fact that the murder was committed during the commission of a robbery, and the fact that aggravating circumstances exist allows for a stiffer penalty for the defendant.

Judge Lovelace instructed the jury that on the charge of murder they could recommend a sentence of between 20 years and life in prison with the possibility of parole in 20 years, life without parole for 25 years, or life without parole.

He further instructed the jury that on the other two charges, both being class B felonies, they could recommend a sentence of no less than 10 or more than 20 years, with the accused having to serve 85 percent of the sentence before he would be eligible for parole. He also informed the jury that they would need to recommend whether the three sentences would run concurrently or consecutively, and that Young would be given credit for time served.

When the jury returned, they recommended to Lovelace that Young be sentenced to 25 years for the murder of Martin, and 20 years each on the charges of arson and robbery. They further recommended that the sentences run concurrently, making him eligible for parole in 20 years. Lovelace will pronounce final sentencing on Young on June 28 in Burkesville.

Detective Michael Dubree possibly summed the situation up best at the conclusion of the trial when he said: "Nobody wins in these things. What brings some closure to one family, tears another apart. In the end, one family loses a father, another a son."

Sports in Kentucky

by Bob Watkins

Memorial Day brought Anthony to mind, Man with a plan

Memorial Day. Tribute then, albeit belated, to veterans who served or are serving our country.

A special salute today to heroes. For me, two of them.

- Green County native Sergeant Dakota Meyer, America's newest Congressional Medal of Honor winner. What valor. (See 60 Minutes, May 27).
- And, a man you've never heard of, but Anthony's first name will do. He remains for me a symbol – model for crisp sense of duty, clarity of purpose, unflappable confidence.

As it did for you, Memorial Day brought to mind moments in the military experience that left an eternal tattoo on us. Ups and downs, day upon day, I enjoyed serving our country. The camaraderie and team-ness.

Anthony was proud of his Airman First Class (3) stripes. Had to send a photo home immediately.

We were good pals for what seems five minutes, all those years ago. Here was an arrow straight 20-year-old from a tough neighborhood in Phoenix who skipped the: "This your first pair-o-shoes, Kentucky?" question.

Copper-skinned Anthony was ethnic-sensitive and too pleasant and gracious for stupidity. He had questions about Daniel Boone, Abe Lincoln and the Kentucky Derby.

Young man with coal black hair, teeth so white, smile so perfect, you wanted to punch him. He had a soft Mexican turn in his English and killer personality. Here was a fellow comfortable in the moment and in his skin too. Confident in where he was going. He loved his dress blue uniform and spit-shined his shoes. When he polished, Anthony would hum the appropriate Elvis Presley classic.

While others hated it, he loved marching in base parades, clopping along in harmony aaaaUP-2-3-4. And, he tried to locate himself as near the American flag as we marched as possible.

"I am a career man, man," he would say with pause for effect on the second 'man.' "Good life, man. Good life. Career. You should be one too and re-up, Roberto," he would say.

"Go now, man, and re-enlist. We will get promoted to staff (Sergeant) together. If you get out, man, it is beeg mistake."

Laughter.

Anthony had a plan. I had a hunch. Re-up wasn't for me.

We reflect more as we grow older, don't we? I can't recount a baseball ball score from yesterday, but a decades old experience can be clear as a drink of water.

Finally, when winter turned to spring back there and time for rotation back to USA was short, Anthony did his re-enlist routine less often. We had come to this Life junction from the same direction, but were destined for different destinations for the next stops. One cold and dreary April morning we saluted one another, Anthony and me, shook hands and said good-bye there at Mildenhall Air Base near London for a flight home. Anthony would be leaving a week later, he said.

"Gonna spend a few days in Phoenix with Mom and the kids, then go on to California. Get ready for my new assignment and a promotion," he said. "I'm goin' to Vet Nim."

Was April, 1965. He hadn't learned yet how to pronounce Vietnam.

Two months later a telephone call came.

Anthony had gotten his promotion to Staff Sergeant. A week later he was killed by a Viet Cong "freedom fighter."

From then until now, never met anyone quite like this man.

All the way to now, I wonder where Life would have taken him. He had such plans.

Memorial Day ... a salute for our honored ones.

ONE-AND-DONE, ANOTHER VIEW

Peter Keating writes for ESPN Magazine. He has an idea to "fix the scourge of the one and done rule." NCAA officials should consider the National Hockey League model.

"Hockey has a universal draft," Keating points out. "NHL teams can pick anybody from anywhere who's 18 to 20 and hasn't already been picked or played in the league. Kids don't have to declare for the draft as with the NBA. And, a team that drafts him retains his rights whether he stays in college one day or four years.

"Unfortunately, the one-and-done system isn't just bad for the NCAA," Keating goes on, "it destroys continuity among top (college) programs. It's bad for the talent too, producing fewer top players for the NBA."

From 1995 to 2005, 47 high schoolers entered the draft. Led by Kobe Bryant, six became superstars. Since 2006 three of 49 became franchise players – Kevin Durant, Kevin Love and Derrick Rose. Meanwhile, nine one-and-doners were not drafted at all, three more are not even in the D-League.

Conclusion? Abolish the 19-year-old rule, stop the one year in college pretense. Both would serve professional basketball and the college game.

'WORTH REPEATING' NUGGETS

- Dr. Tubby Smith. Minnesota's coach asks his recruits: "What have you done besides play basketball to make your school better, make your family better, make your community better?"
- Joker Phillips. Two seasons ago Kentucky's coach was responding to red-shirt freshman's complaint about lack of playing time. "It definitely helps when you keep your mouth shut and do your job," Phillips explained. The athlete finally earned his playing time and was on schedule to being an All-SEC candidate. Too bad for Ridge Wilson. He was dismissed from the team this year after being arrested for drug possession.

- Bob Knight. Three seasons ago Knight put the light of day on the cheapness of John Calipari's one-and-done approach to college basketball.

"An incoming freshman has to pass six hours in the first semester – six hours with a D," Knight said. "Second semester a player technically need not attend class at all to keep eligible since by end of semester and grade accountability, the NCAA Tournament is finished and one-and-done candidates are preparing to announce they will stand for June's NBA Draft.

"That's not what college basketball should be about," he went on. "Not only to what would be best for the game, but what would be best for the kids (who) play the game."

- Bob Sheppard, late public address announcer at Yankee Stadium: "An announcer should be clear, concise and correct. He should not be colorful, cute or comic."
- Rajon Rondo. NBA brass ruled players may not wear head bands upside down. Sports writer Bill Dwyer wrote, "most players had stopped wearing head bands altogether, but (Rajon) Rondo carried on, upside down all the way, with Jerry West facing downward on national TV dozens of times a year as the Celtics played in two NBA title series."

So, the Rondo Rule was put in..

Playing a kid's game wearing head bands is stupid. Rondo wearing his upside down brought to mind an old John Wayne remark. "Life is hard; it's harder if you're stupid."

And so it goes.

Spring sports comes to an end

Our Clinton County Lady Bat Dawgs were the longest surviving of the Spring Sports teams, advancing into this week's 4th Regional Tournament at Bowling Green.

The Lady Bat Dawgs saw their season come to an end on Memorial Day, with a 10-6 loss at the hands of Franklin Simpson Monday.

Still, it was another good year for Coach Darrell Thompson and his team, finishing the season with a very impressive 28-11 overall record and a trip to the regionals.

Congrats team on a nice season.

So, with the end of the Spring Sports regionals comes a little break from high school sports. Of course the football team will be getting ready for the fall season, and the basketball teams will be working in summer games and open gym night, but the pace slows for a couple of months, anyway.

Up next, for the CCHS athletes, we'll see our Golf Dawgs practicing and getting their seasons underway in the late summer, followed by volleyball, football, soccer and cross country.

For now - take a few weeks off.

Youth League baseball

There have been some nice crowds on hand at Mountain View Rec Park as the local Youth League baseball and softball teams go through their season games. If you are a baseball fan, and enjoy some eager players, then the action is some of the most entertaining around. Stop by and enjoy an afternoon at the baseball field.

Lake crowds were big

Spent the weekend on Dale Hollow and the crowd there was what would best be described as heavy but manageable. Made one quick trip out to the main part of the lake, and a couple of trips to the cliffs area near Shear Pin Pass. If this crowd is an indication of how the summer is going to go - expect a busy one.

Fishing for kids.

Just a short note about the upcoming annual fishing derby at the Wolf Creek National Fish Hatchery just across the Clinton-Russell boundary below Wolf Creek Dam.

The 26th Annual Kids Fishing Derby - aka Catch a Rainbow, is set to be held Saturday, June 2. An all-day event, fishing gets underway at 9:00 a.m. for the youngest, and continues through the early afternoon hours for the oldest kids participating.

River

addressed the fiscal court about the local project they said had been in the works since 2008.

Brooker is currently overseeing the local venture, which was estimated to be at least a $140,000 project.

Wheatley said the department's strategic plan called for increasing angler/fishermen access to the upper Cumberland River, and that was possible at an area at Wells Bottom in northern Clinton County. He added that a property owner in the area had agreed to sell land for the project and funds were in place in the form of a 75/25 matching Sport Fish Recreation grant.

The land the project is taking place on was purchased from Sam Hadley.

Craig is optimistic that in the future, there will be access to the island. He said funding will have to come through donations and fundraising in order for that to happen.

"I'm hoping a swinging bridge can be constructed at some point to give people access to the island," Craig said.

The island is called Snow Island and is located just east of Rockhouse on the Cumberland River.

"This is going to be nice," Craig said. "People who want to fish can come down here at no extra charge. It's going to be a good thing. People can bring their kids down here and things like that."

The project, when completed, is expected to be a major tourism and economic boost to the Cumberland River area, including Clinton County.

"It will be a good thing ... it will be good for anybody who wants to fish," Craig said. "People could come down and just sit on the bank. We've got the potential right now to grow."

Once the project is complete, Craig is hoping the county will host events at the fishing location like fishing derbys and other events.

"We need to promote it anyway we can," Craig said. "We need to get these kids out and take them fishing. If you get the kids, you will have the parents."

Although funding through the county is tight and with the budget recently being approved, Craig is hopeful more funding will come from the KDFWR once the area has been utilized by the public.

"We are hoping with this project we can get some funding," Craig said. "The contractor said they were hoping to get it fenced and gated today (Thursday, May 24). They are moving right along with it. It's going to be an added benefit for the county. I honestly believe that they will come up with some more funding for this project. It's going to be too good of a thing and with the fish and wildlife behind it, it will be more interesting for people."

The main reason for the public access to the Cumberland River is the lack of access in the area to the river. The KDFWR wanted to create more access to this fishing and recreational resource.

During that fiscal court meeting last year, Wheatley explained there were only two current access points to the Cumberland River at this time, those being below the dam and at Helm's Bottom.

He went on to estimate that opening the third access point would create up to a $300,000 to $400,000 economic impact to this area, and noted even that was a conservative estimate.

"Most of the area around the upper Cumberland is private ownership, so there are limited access areas," Wheatley said. He said the extra access point from Clinton County, the already estimated 36,000 number of anglers who use the river for fishing and tourism each year would likely only increase. He added that the shoal of the island at Wells Bottom would be one of the better fishing points on the Cumberland River.

In late July of 2011, the court, with assistance from County Attorney Michael Rains and advice from the Department of Local Government, voted to amend its road ordinance to help clear the way for the access road.

The project will be beneficial to our youth, local fishermen, and families, Judge Lyle Huff said at a fiscal court meeting earlier in the year, adding he felt there would be family functions such as picnics and other activities that would take place at the site in the future.

"I'm pleased with the cooperation shown by the fiscal court, my office and the Department of Fish and Wildlife in making this project possible," he added.

Craig said that added tax revenues, plus the possibility of additional homes being built in the area as an indirect result of the project will be a positive one for the county even in years to come.

"If we (fiscal court) hadn't of acted on it (project), another county would have," Craig continued, in noting the department was looking for another access area from some point when they decided the area in Clinton County would be the best.

Kentucky Emergency Medical Services for Children offers tips

As families get ready for summer fun the Kentucky Emergency Medical Services for Children (EMSC) Program is educating families on how to be more prepared if there is an emergency involving a child. It could be a fall from a bike...a sudden high fever or seizure...a pot knocked from the stove. What if your child started choking during dinner? What if a child was stung by a bee and suddenly couldn't breathe? Would you know what to do? It is estimated 30 million children will receive emergency care this year. If you are a parent or caregiver for a child, here are eight things your family can do to assist medical personnel if a child needs emergency care:

1. BE PREPARED FOR THE CORRECT 9-1-1 CALL. Some areas of the country do not have 9-1-1. Others have E-9-1-1 where your address is automatically stored in a database. Make sure you know what is available where you live and work. Teach your child how to call 9-1-1 and give the appropriate information to the emergency operator.

2. KEEP A WELL-STOCKED FIRST-AID KIT ON HAND. From minor cuts and bruises to sunburns and sprains, a good first-aid kit is a great first line of defense.

3. MAKE A LIST OF EMERGENCY PHONE NUMBERS. Write down the numbers you need in a family emergency plan that is easy to access at all times. Be sure to include the Poison Control Center number, 1-800-222-1222, operators are available 24 hours a day.

4. MAKE SURE YOUR HOUSE NUMBER IS VISIBLE FROM THE STREET. Make it easy for police, fire officials or emergency medical personnel to find your house. Put large house numbers in a highly visible area. Make sure the numbers are well-lit and can be seen at night.

5. KEEP A CLEAR AND UP-TO-DATE RECORD OF IMMUNIZATIONS. This can help doctors do a better job of diagnosing a problem in an emergency. For example, if your child has a bad infection, and the doctor knows your child has been vaccinated against Hepatitis, the doctor can rule that out. This can save valuable time.

6. WRITE DOWN MEDICAL CONDITIONS, MEDICATIONS AND DOSAGES. Being prepared in advance can help assure proper treatment and prevent serious drug interactions.

7. MAKE A LIST OF ALLERGIES AND REACTIONS. This will help ensure that health care professionals don't use medicines that can hurt your child. It can also help emergency medical personnel find a reason for problems such as seizures or shortness of breath. If any of your children have severe drug allergies or chronic conditions, they should wear Medical I.D. bracelets.

8. TAKE FIRST-AID CLASSES. A basic class will teach CPR and proper ways to treat burns, wrap sprains, apply splints and perform the Heimlich maneuver. Remember, if you take time now, you won't lose precious time when your child's life could depend on it. It's a good idea to ask everyone who takes care of your children to take these classes.

These steps can help your family be prepared, because no matter how hard you try to protect your children, emergencies has made it through the past decade with a balanced budget without having to raise taxes. She also added that sometime in the future, to maintain the services the residents deserve without cuts, some type of tax hike, or possibly the ambulance service becoming a taxing district may become necessary.

Bernard

"Working with the (fiscal) court taught me to work with a group of people and make decisions that impact people and families," said Bernard. She also likened the judge/executive relationship to the fiscal court to that of a superintendent and a board of education.

"I learned fiscal management while on the court," she added, saying the court decides where to spend money for the greatest good and hopes to continue that role in the school district as superintendent.

Bernard said the thing she would miss most about being a magistrate is working to help families with their problems. However, she said now she would be working with families on a broader scale in her new position.

The superintendent-to-be said that her decision to seek the position as schools' chief was varied, but primarily a next step in her career in education and the fact she was a mother of three children and was vested in the educational process. She also said she feels she has strong communication skills and has been in contact with several different local and state officials at all levels, which would be another asset.

Bernard has been employed in the Clinton County School District for 19 years, the first 12 in the classroom from grades preschool through 8th grade and those years in the classroom is a major factor in why she believes she will be a good fit as superintendent of schools.

"I feel I have something to offer to teachers from being in the classroom for several years...I realize the task they have and I want to help make their jobs easier and supply them with the tools necessary to make it easier for them to teach their students."

As far as being the first woman in the superintendent's seat in a full century and the first in modern time, she doesn't feel that will make any difference.

In fact, she said, "as a woman I have motherly instincts and that may enhance my ability to do the job better and have the most effective impact."

Bernard also praised outgoing Superintendent Mickey McFall for his leadership over the past decade, noting he had kept the district in the black financially and always worked within the budget, despite recent cuts in funding.

"You have to set a budget and work within your means," Bernard said. She also noted that with the decrease in SEEK funding, it is more important now than ever to maintain a high attendance rate, since the amount of those funds depend largely on the percent of average daily attendance--something she has done for the past several months as DPP for the district.

Bernard said she sees no major changes in the way the office of superintendent is operated or in policy, although there are policy changes and adjustments that become necessary at times.

The new superintendent also said she looked forward to having a close working relationship with faculty and staff at all levels.

Bernard earned her Bachelor of Arts degree from Lindsey Wilson College with an emphasis on math in 1992; attended Western Kentucky University with an emphasis on elementary education in 2000; and earned her Master of Arts from Eastern Kentucky University in 2004 and Professional Certificates from the same school in School Superintendent, Supervisor of Instruction and Director of Pupil Personnel as well as Principal K-12 in 2011.

Bernard has also been coordinator of Home Hospital; Home School; Safe Schools/Healthy Students Project Director; Family Literacy Coordinator; Reading First District Coach; and, Even Start Grant Director.

In her interview with the board of education before her hiring, she stated, "I think a successful leader must set a vision for the district, establish goals on how to accomplish the vision and empower administrators, teachers, and staff with tools and the support necessary to succeed."

As far as a superintendent's direct duties, she said it was the "chief education advisor to the (school) board, and must carry out all policies established by the board, operating within the laws governing education to provide oversight and management of all school operations and of all school personnel."

Insofar as the board of education, she feels the board represents the community, governing the schools and serving as an advocate for students, in addition to setting policy for the schools and monitoring and evaluating achievement of the schools.

"Together, the board and superintendent must work as a team moving toward one common goal--educating students. It is critical that a board and superintendent send a message to the community that the leadership is strong, capable, fair, open and committed; this will create a feeling of confidence among the district staff and parents," she said.

Bernard further believes the superintendent must set a clear direction for instruction that everyone understands and use their leadership and motivation to communicate the goals to school leaders, teachers and staff.

Finally, the new schools' chief believes morale is a major contributor to a district's success, saying "as much as any single factor, low staff morale can lead to a decline in productivity of employees, and high staff morale can lead to higher effort and productivity. I think an effective superintendent must be very aware of the climate and morale throughout the school district and continuously work to make the schools more welcoming, inspiring, nurturing and satisfying for the teachers, staff, students, and parents."

Bernard, a life-long resident of Clinton County, has two teenage sons, Ellis, 18, Evan, 17 and a daughter, 13-year-old Addison.

(Footnote: According to local historian and Attorney David Cross, the first, and up to now, only female superintendent in the Clinton County Schools was Ermon Sloan, who later became Ermon Sloan Koger.

She was actually elected to the position in 1909--a time when women didn't even yet have the right to vote, except in school elections. Also, at that juncture in history, school superintendents in Kentucky were elected. They began being appointed by the Boards of Education in 1920.

Sloan served only one term as superintendent, having been defeated for re-election four years later. She married Dr. Robert Koger and they moved to Norwich, Kansas, where Dr. Koger practiced medicine for several years.

Koger is related to the Sloan families that reside in Clinton County to this day.)

Deep Throat is revealed

May 31, 2005

W. Mark Felt's family ends 30 years of speculation, identifying Felt, the former FBI assistant director, as "Deep Throat", the secret source who helped unravel the Watergate scandal. The Felt family's admission, made in an article in Vanity Fair magazine, took legendary reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, who had promised to keep their source's identity a secret until his death, by surprise. Tapes show that Nixon himself had speculated that Felt was the secret informant as early as 1973.

The question "Who was Deep Throat?" had been investigated relentlessly in the ensuing years since Watergate in movies, books, televisions shows, and on the internet. America was obsessed with the shadowy figure who went to great lengths to conceal his involvement with the Washington Post reporters. Although his name was often mentioned as a possibility, Felt consistently denied being Deep Throat, even writing in his 1979 memoir, "I never leaked information to Woodward and Bernstein or to anyone else!" Even as recently as six years before the admission, he was quoted as saying, "It would be contrary to my responsibility as a loyal employee of the FBI to leak information."

After the death of J. Edgar Hoover, then director of the FBI, Felt wanted the job and was angry over Nixon's failure to appoint him. He was also upset over Nixon's attempts to stall the bureau's investigation into the Watergate break-ins. So, when Bob Woodward called the veteran FBI employee to request information about the bureau's Watergate investigation, Felt agreed to talk. But his cooperation came with strict restrictions. Felt refused to be quoted, even anonymously, and agreed only to confirm information already obtained, refusing to provide new information. And, of course, the reporters had to promise to keep his identity a secret. Felt was only contacted on matters of great importance.

Although the two initially talked by phone, Felt soon began to worry that his phones could be tapped, so he and Woodward devised a set of signals and began to meet in the middle of the night in a parking garage. Over the ensuing months, Felt corroborated stories linking Nixon's reelection committee to the Watergate break-ins and illegal investigations of the Democratic Party. He also alerted Woodward to the far-reaching nature of the scandal, indicating that it could be traced back to government higher-ups, including President Nixon himself.

In the aftermath of Felt's admission, both Woodward and Bernstein expressed worries that, due to the intense interest in the Deep Throat mystery over the years, Felt's role in unraveling the complicated web of lies and deceit that was Watergate may be overstated. They reminded Americans that other sources, Nixon's secret White House tape recordings, the Senate's Watergate hearings, and the historic action of the U. S. Supreme Court all played an important role in bringing the truth to light.

In 1973, the Washington Post won a Pulitzer Prize in public service for its coverage of the Watergate scandal.

W. Mark Felt died on December 18, 2008 at the age of 95.

Babe Ruth retires

June 2, 1935

On this day in 1935, Babe Ruth, one of the greatest players in the history of baseball, ends his Major League playing career after 22 seasons, 10 World Series, and 714 home runs. The following year, Ruth, a larger-than-life figure whose name became synonymous with baseball, was one of the first five players inducted into the sport's hall of fame.

George Herman Ruth was born in 1895 to a poor family in Baltimore. As a child, he was sent to St. Mary's Industrial School for Boys, run by Roman Catholic brothers. It was there that he learned to play baseball. He signed with the Baltimore Orioles, which was a minor league team at that time, at 19. Ruth's fellow teammates and the media began referring to him as team owner Jack Dunn's newest "babe," a nickname that stuck. Ruth would later acquire other nicknames such as "The Sultan of Swing" and "The Bambino."

The southpaw slugger's final season in 1935 was with the Boston Braves. He had joined the Braves with the hope of becoming the team's manager the next season. However, this dream never came to pass for a disappointed Ruth, who had a reputation for excessive drinking, gambling, and womanizing.

He did, however, in 1938, take a coaching position with the Brooklyn Dodgers at first base.

His baseball career finally came to an end in 1943, when in a charity game at Yankee Stadium, he pinch hit and drew a walk. In 1947, he became director of the American Legion's youth baseball program.

Ruth died in 1948 of throat cancer at age 53. His body lay in state at Yankee Stadium for two days and was visited by over 100,000 fans.

Kentucky Facts and Trivia: Know your neighbors

Clinton County is adjacent to Russell County (north); Wayne County (east); Pickett County, Tennessee (southeast); Clay County, Tennessee, (southwest); and Cumberland County (west).

Wayne County was formed in 1800 from parts of Pulaski and Cumberland counties. It was the 43rd county and is named for General "Mad Anthony" Wayne. General Wayne was a United States Army general and statesman. He adopted a military career at the outset of the American Revolutionary War, where his military exploits and fiery personality quickly earned him a promotion to the rank of brigadier general and the nickname of Mad Anthony.

Many political jurisdictions and institutions are named after Wayne, especially in Ohio, Michigan, and Indiana, where he fought many of his battles. George Washington placed Wayne in command of a newly-formed military force called Legion of the United States where Wayne established a basic training facility at Legionville to prepare professional soliders for his force. Wayne's was the first attempt to provide basic training for regular U. S. Army recruits and Legionville was the first facility established expressly for this purpose.

That's how many Kentucky adults read a daily, Sunday or weekly newspaper in an average week.

That's more than 5 out of 6 people.

And truth be told, we like to think that 6th person may be listening while one of the other five reads out loud.

This fact brought to you by the Kentucky Press Association and its 162 member newspapers.

IN

In Memory

In Memory of Murl Conner, whose birthday would have been on June 2nd.

We'll meet again when this world ends, but until then, I'll remember all your good years, your laughter and your tears.

I'll remember how you came through it all, standing so tall, never complaining, because you were too tough to fall.

I'll remember how you always had time for a friend, a smile and helping hand. You were a big, big hearted man.

Yes, we'll meet again when this world ends, but until then, I'll remember all the funny things you used to say and do and all the wonderful times that we shared, too. Yes, I'll remember from day to day all I just want to say, we'll meet again when this world ends.
